Silence is a Statement: Understanding Race in the Workplace
Allison Manswell, MBA, Certified Professional in Learning & Performance

There are many complicated reasons why we, as a nation and as individuals, often avoid discussing race at work. As a result, significant disparities in hiring, development, promotion and salary continue to exist along racial lines. Current events are demonstrating a strong need to address this topic openly and help move us forward as a nation and as individuals in our workplace.

Achieving Greater Workplace Equity for LGBTQ Employees
Stephanie V. Huckel, Senior Global Program Manager, Diversity & Inclusion, IGT

Fifty-three percent of LGBTQ employees hide who they are at work. They question their workplace’s commitment to them while they simply desire an experience equitable to that of their heterosexual and cisgender peers. This dialogue will provide participants with the tools necessary to communicate with and to LGBTQ employees in a way that sends the message “You are welcome here.”

From Diversity to Inclusion: 10 Years of Dialogue

Over the last ten years, the FAS Diversity Dialogue series has sparked conversation about diversity, equality, and inclusion in the Harvard community and beyond. Join us for a retrospective look at the state of diversity and inclusion, and discussion of current issues and practical guidance on how we can move toward greater inclusion and belonging at Harvard.

We are pleased to announce that our keynote speaker will be Tim Wise, prominent activist, author and educator. In addition to the keynote, the conference will include a moderated panel discussion, lunch, a book signing, and an opportunity to meet colleagues and to learn more.

Spring, 2019
